

ABSTRACT

A thermal control device for controlling the temperature of a craft/spacecraft by means of an electrostatic switch to change the mode of heat transfer of the craft/spacecraft skin from conduction to radiation. The change is by means of a large change in apparent emissivity. The device can operate with moderate levels of DC voltages. Application of voltage results in high emissivity while removal of voltage results in low emissivity.